

GRAF ZEPPELIN BATTLES WINDS

PROGRESS OF AIRSHIP SLOWER THAN EXPECTED; MAY END FLIGHT MONDAY

By UNITED PRESS
The dirigible Graf Zeppelin on her second flight from Friedrichshafen to Lakehurst, N. J., established contact with the United States Navy at Washington Friday night, and so was on the second half of her journey—a smooth one, though retarded by contrary winds.

Previously a dispatch from Ponta Del Gada, in the Eastern Azores group, reported that the Zeppelin dropped mail over Santa Maria Islands, 30 miles south.

The dirigible Graf Zeppelin, her way beset by contrary winds almost constantly since she left Friedrichshafen, Germany, for Lakehurst, N. J., pushed slowly over the Atlantic Friday night, tacking her way against a strong head wind that beat across her bow.

The dirigible was nearing the Azores at last reports but may not pass directly over the islands, so that the next report of her position is likely to come from a ship or through a direct message from the Zeppelin herself when she comes within range of American stations.

The Zeppelin carries 18 passengers, including two women; a crew of 30, a stowaway; 600 canaries; two Simians known as Susy and Loocy; more than a ton of mail; a piano, and the hopes of Germany emphasizing further her supremacy in ocean dirigible traffic.

Left Thursday
The dirigible left Friedrichshafen at 3:30 a. m. Thursday (9:30 p. m. E. S. T. Wednesday). She was reported about 500 miles off the coast of Spain at 2:20 p. m. E. S. T. Friday, having at that time traveled approximately 1700 miles in 41 hours, or about 42 miles an hour. Unless her speed increases materially, she could not be expected at Lakehurst before late Monday.

Reports of the Zeppelin's progress since she left the Mediterranean coast of France on Thursday have been meager. The air-

NOW WONDER WHAT 'T WAS

Whether Richmond was shaken by an earthquake or an explosion early yesterday morning is still a much mooted question here.

At 2:02 o'clock a. m. a distinct shock was felt here, rattling windows and breaking dishes. Patrolman George Reiteschneider reported that he was almost thrown from his chair at the police desk by the force of the shock.

The University of California and the University of Santa Clara reported that they had not recorded an earthquake. Local plants denied there had been an explosion.

YOUTH DIES FROM CRASH INJURIES

With one victim of a motorcycle automobile crash on Thursday dead, slight hopes are held for the recovery of the second youth, Herbert Landice, 20, of San Luis Obispo.

Edwin Landice, aged 18, died at a local hospital yesterday morning as the result of injuries suffered in the crash which occurred near the Lighthouse Inn intersection of San Pablo avenue and the Dam road.

Herbert lies at the Cottage hospital suffering from a broken left thigh, two fractures of the left leg, a broken left wrist, teeth knocked out and painful cuts and bruises on the face and body. His condition was reported last night as "very serious."

The dead boy was identified at the time of the accident as Joe Viera of San Luis Obispo. Herbert Landice, who had been in an unconscious condition, regained consciousness long enough yesterday morning to properly identify his brother.

The body of Edwin has been taken to the Wilson and Kratzer chapel. An inquest into the death is pending. Relatives have been notified.

According to police reports, the boys were traveling north on San Pablo avenue and Joe Viera, of San Pablo creek was making a left hand turn on his way home, when the crash occurred. His car was struck on the right front wheel by the cycle, which careened sideways and skidded off the highway, according to the police. Burch was uninjured.

Favorable wind conditions, in contrast to mild gales that previously had caused considerable alarm, aided the rangers and volunteers in forcing the flames back to fire lines today.

Rain clouds also appeared over the danger area and with the abatement of the winds, renewed hope was given to residents of the threatened Lake Superior shore settlements.

In all, approximately 100 fires have occupied the attention of rangers and volunteers.

THE WOMAN OF IT

BY MARGUERITE MOOERS MARSHALL

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1929
Business and the Older Woman

"I HAVE read with much interest your column in The Evening World, in which you challenge Louis E. Van Norman's assertion that business men 'discourage the utilization of sex appeal in the business world.' writes 'A Woman.' 'If Mr. Van Norman is right, why, you ask, are business men so bitterly hostile to the employment of middle-aged women? Your analysis is correct in every detail; only, to get a more vivid picture of the situation, you would have to be traveling around for the last two and a half months as I have been doing, in a depressing, heart-rending search for employment."

"I have held one position for the past twelve years, as head bookkeeper in one of the most progressive concerns manufacturing women's apparel in this city, selling only to the high-class stores. I am also a stenographer and typist, understand filing and all office details, and can even operate a switchboard. I have put in many useful business years and, although I have gray hair, was in hope of putting in many more years; but I am unable to get the most simple kind of office work."

"Some of the agencies will not send me out at all, and I am given to understand that from eight to twenty-five years is the age limit for hiring office female help. If I answer an advertisement and do not state my age I am sure to get a reply, as I can furnish the highest credentials. But when I call for an interview, it is too late, or too early, or there are others to be interviewed—or any one of a dozen excuses."

"I THINK that I could write a book of my experiences—they are absolutely unbelievable. For what can these young, untrained girls know in the business line to warrant such preference? After all, business is business, and they are only cogs in the wheel, with their lack of experience. It took years to make me capable and fit. How can these girls, many of them thinking of nothing but their own pleasure, be an asset to any firm?"

"And look at what other business organizations do! Every week there are broken-hearted, middle-aged salespeople, who have spent the best part of their lives in their positions, being 'let out' for the incompetent newcomers."

"What will be the result of this policy? With the high cost of living, it has been almost impossible for many women workers to save anything, and the result will be many, many more to fill the ranks of the aged dependents to whom they are trying now to give pensions. This will mean more taxes for the people."

"I am an American, a voter, in the best of health, a conscientious and hard worker, with two dependents on me, with all the qualifications previously stated. Does it not seem shameful that I cannot get work? It is my only period of idleness in my whole business career. I just walked out of one position into another until this emergency—due solely to my gray hairs!"

"Such discrimination against the middle-aged woman, it seems to us frankly outrageous and utterly unjustifiable. Yet every woman downtown knows that it exists. Stuart Chase, author of 'Men and Machines,' one of the summer's most thoughtful books, has in his current Harper's a tragically illuminating article about the lay-off of men and women at the age of forty."

"Do they stop because they have saved a competence upon which to retire? he writes. Does it not seem shameful that I cannot get work? It is my only period of idleness in my whole business career. I just walked out of one position into another until this emergency—due solely to my gray hairs!"

"Never until the last few years, and in no other country save America, have age limits been set up—written or unwritten—in quantity lots; never has the threat of old-age dependency for both manual and white-collar job, assumed an uglier aspect."

And the case of women seems to us harder than that of men because, for women, the age deadline is set even lower—it is creeping, we are told, from thirty-five to twenty-five in office positions. Horrors, according to a statement just made by the Vice Chairman of the New York Commission on Old Age Security are better treated than aged dependents nowadays! Yet their numbers are being unnecessarily increased, by this policy of scrapping the workers in early middle age, the workers for whom such qualities as steadiness, judgment and long experience should at least counterbalance the quickness, the energy and the physical attractiveness of youth."

Women, in a position to employ or to recommend other women can do nothing more kind or more just than to stamp upon this man-made prejudice against maturity, and to do everything in their power to give the efficient older worker her right to work!

PASSAGE

If my last day may be like this—With blue breath in the wind for skies, The pink of roses pursed to kiss The stippled wings of butterflies, And, under the hay-blown field, the quail Pipe crystallinely as the pool Their tapered branches in its cool— I think I shall not greatly care That time must come, and I must go, Since, in my passage, I shall be Dreams of this beauty you love so!

LAURINA JASPER.

'Twas ever thus For the first time! a woman has been put in complete charge of the Queens Street Cleaning Bureau for TWO WEEKS—and in that time she doesn't clean out all corners neglected for long years by her male predecessors, of course she'll prove that women are a failure in office!

LOVE

When I am lying covered deep In any cool bed, And you, my dear, have ceased to weep About the dead:

You still will find a candle flame In some sweet shrine Burning in memory of your name— It will be mine.

MUSINGS ON MENUS

BY NANCY MORRIS

The cool, pink-fleshed watermelon tastes best when the mercury goes sky-larking. The inexpensive summer melon is infinitely to be preferred to the tasteless out-of-season offering. With a chilled red pie watermelon in the kitchenette, a number of interesting ways of serving watermelon suggest themselves. Strictly in the line of course, the guiding star of any watermelon service. The seasonings or garnishments must not be permitted to change the distinct flavor of the melon.

A sprinkling of salt is liked by some, while sugar pleases many. A touch of non-alcoholic berry or other wines delights others. Most people believe that watermelon as nature cannot be improved upon. Cubes of chilled melon tempt the breakfast or bring a meal to a pleasant close. Balls scooped from the heart, piled into cocktail glasses, seasoned with a little non-alcoholic sherry and garnished with a sprig of fragrant mint introduce luncheon or dinner invitingly.

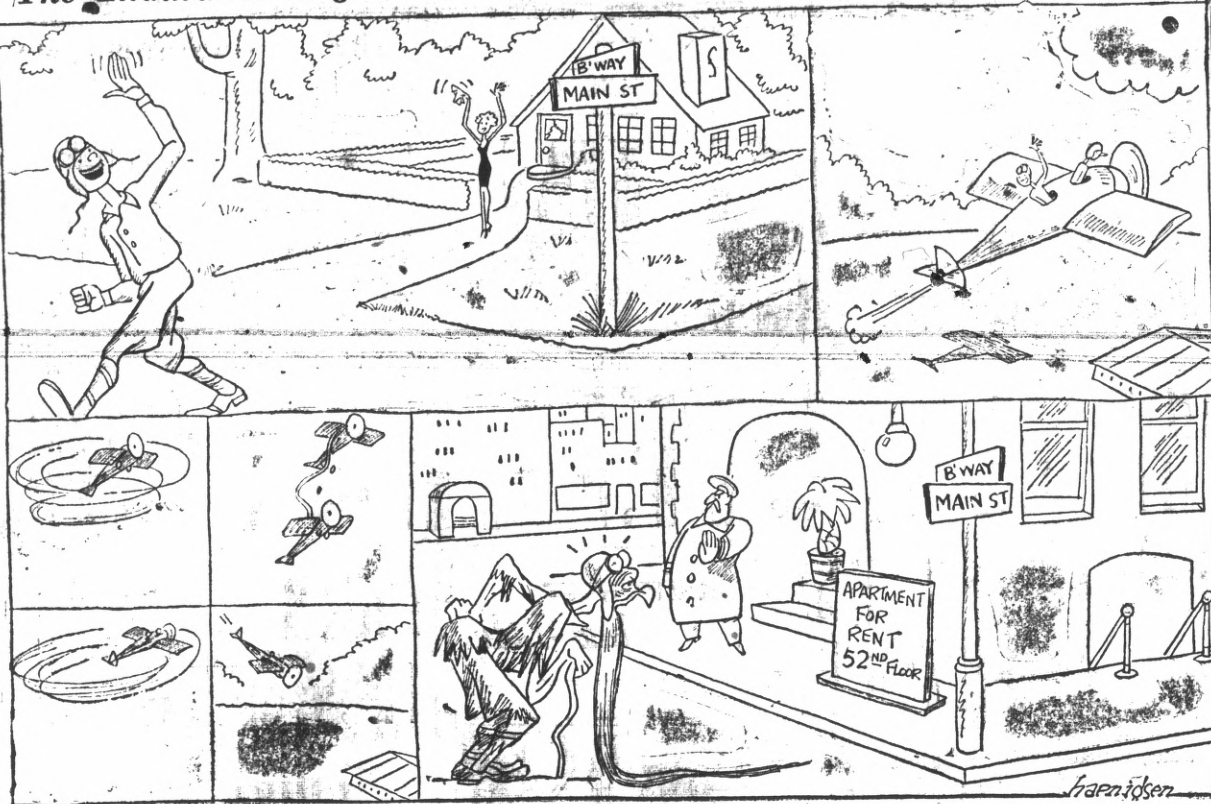

Watermelon ice or sherbet enlivens the fish or meat course or delights at the end of the meal. Watermelon salads are most refreshing with roast beef or fish. The cubes of melon may be served alone with a lemon French dressing or combined with orange sections in the proportion of two cups of the cubes to one-third cup of the sections.

Seeding the melon for the family does seem like a tedious job for a warm summer day. But the trouble taken is small compared to the family's pleasure in the melon surprise. The seeding may be done in the morning hours, or some time before dinner, and the cubes or balls given plenty of time to chill before serving. The seasoning should be added at the moment of serving, else the freshness of the melon will be lost.

WATERMELON SALAD (4). Two cups watermelon cubes. Four crisp lettuce leaves. One-half one-half tablespoons lemon juice. Three tablespoons olive oil. One-half teaspoon salt. One-fourth teaspoon sugar. The amount of lemon juice may be decreased or increased to suit the taste. The following culinary tools and utensils will be helpful in the preparation and serving of the salad: Large sharp knife, cutting board, small sharp knife, fork, measuring cup, glass dish, teaspoon, tablespoon, small bowl, four chilled glass salad plates. Cut two crosswise slices, each an inch thick from the cold watermelon. Lay the slices, one at a time, upon the cutting board and cut away with the sharp knife, leaving a circle of pink meat. With the smaller knife cut the circle into inch cubes upon the board. Take each cube with the fork and remove the seeds carefully. Place the cubes of melon in the measuring cup and when two cups are filled turn into the glass dish and chill until serving time. A few minutes before serving place a tender lettuce leaf upon each chilled salad plate and pile in the center one-half cup of dainty pink cubes. Mix together in the small bowl the olive oil, salt, sugar and lemon juice. Pour over the cubes. Garnish with sprig of mint and serve at once.

The Endurance Flight

The World's Window

PARIS, July.

Joy Among Royals

The royals of France are in ecstasy. Henri, son of the Duke de Guise, has just reached his majority. The Duke de Guise is the Bourbon pretender to the throne of France. He lives in exile at the Anjou Manor in Brussels. In Belgium also lives Henri, his son. He is a student at Louvain University. All this is nothing new, of course. But what makes the Royals so happy is the receipt in Paris of a bust of the young Prince by the well-known sculptor, Maxime Real del Sarte, an ardent royalist himself. Now some fervent admirer of the forty Kings who in a thousand years made France, and their descendants has discovered that young Henri resembles, like another drop of water, Henri IV, the who wanted each Frenchman to have a chicken in the pot Sunday; 'le vert-galant'; the ardent lover, famous for a hundred adventures and scandals, the great statesman who united France and defied the world; Henri, who thought Paris well worth a mass, and then allied himself with the most stubborn heretics on earth, Barneveldt and Orange, of Holland. The nose is Henri's, the royalists, the same magnanimous forehead, the same deep-set eyes and vigorous chin. Ah, there's a King for you! What's more, this young Henri is an excellent scholar, the pride of his professors. What a King he will make!

And such grace, merriment, such infinite tact! Every inch a Prince of France. What a pity he must stay out of France. But stay out he must. A young man who on his twenty-first birthday says: 'I claim all the rights, I undertake all the duties, I accept all the demands of a Prince of the House of France,' such a young man may become a danger to the republic, especially if it's true that the royalists say of him, that he is a born leader of men.

Good and Bad Doctors Paris has a new 'affaire,' the Affaire Renner. Not so serious, to be sure, as the Affaire Dreyfus, of horrible memory, but exciting enough to divide press and public into two camps. Renner is the name of a servant who cures, or believes he cures tuberculosis. He volunteers to show the Academy of Medicine his method, but that official body turned a deaf ear. However, two famous professors investigated and came out in favor of his system. Definite news on the nature of the cure is not available to the public. Perhaps it's genuine, perhaps not. has issued a bulletin saying that time will tell, which is a rather conservative statement to make and perhaps the right one. Medicine seems a complicated business enough these days. All sorts of remedies and cures are offered from all sides. You hear of doctors who inject in the nose, where, they say, certain glands are located that play an essential role in your entire physical condition. Others inject in the hollow of your feet, which must be a ticklish business. Others, again, rub your backbone when you feel run down or massage the sympathetic nerve, wherever that is located. The most redoubtable are the ones that want to cut and carve or mutilate your stomach with pills and potions to put your organs back into shape. The most inoffensive, the kindest, the most expert physicians and surgeons that we can think of are those scholars and gentlemen, those savants and genuine benefactors of humanity, who shake their heads pensively and tell you with a sigh that two months' absolute rest in the mountains of Switzerland or the magic shores of the Riviera is absolutely necessary for your constitution. Alas, they are rare! But that's the way it is in life with all our precious and valuable things.

Sound and Smell-Films

We have sound films, which is a fine achievement, technically and later also aesthetically, it is to be hoped. The first photograph, let us remember, screamed horribly. Nothing will stop the movies now in their headlong race for perfection in recreating reality in all its details. No doubt we will also get the sound-book. You read about a battle in the war, you see him-bom-bom, the page will thunder and rattle and whizz, just like it goes when two armies do their stunts. Possibly our inventors, whose genius is boundless, will make the book even odoriferous. So that the reader will smell the powder and the film audience the mustard gas. That would be realism carried to a logical conclusion. The possibilities are without limit. What will prevent flower painters from imparting to their color creations the habitual perfume of flowers in the field, once such an odoriferous mechanism is developed. The prospect is delicious. Future generations are destined to live in constant bliss and ecstasy. Of course there are drawbacks. For instance, let us say an odoriferous film in which slap-bag comedians ring about a Limburger cheese or an old Camembert.

Newest French Beach Togs

NO HAT, no stockings, not even an anklet is needed to enhance or to add to the cost of this lovely bathing suit and scarf of Scotch plaid. The top is plain white with the Scotch thistle monogram. Scotch all around, judging by its design and cut, despite its Parisian birth. The shoes are plain black, the sort of shoe one finds in every girl's wardrobe. By merely removing the scarf and shoes, the suit is feasible for swimming. For those who just cannot tolerate the feel of water in their ears a plain white skull cap would answer the purpose and would not add greatly to the attire in either cost or bulk.

A Tea Time Story

THE Lady who had just decided to go to Reno to establish a residence there went to announce this decision to a friend whom she found in tears.

"What happened?" asked the divorcee-to-be apprehensively. "What calamity has befallen you?"

"It's my beautiful Ming plate," sobbed her friend. "I was so proud of it—I loved it with all my heart. And a silly and careless young maid dropped it and now it's broken."

"That is really too bad," said the Lady. "What are you going to do?"

"What can I do?" moaned the friend. "I'll have to throw the pieces away, but my loss and try to forget that I ever had the plate."

"But, my dear," said the Lady, "that would be foolish and wasteful. You can do that with a thing of lesser value, but a Ming plate—If I were you I'd try to repair it, provided, of course, it is not broken into smithereens."

"No, not smithereens exactly," admitted the friend. "It's a bad break enough—right through the middle, the heart of the plate, one could say—and I am afraid a chip has been splintered off, but perhaps it can be repaired. Only I have not the heart to try."

"Because—because I wonder if it's worth while trying to mend a thing that was dear to one and that is spoiled."

"Of course it's worth while. You loved it!"

"Yes, and love is pride in the perfection of the beloved object, and when this pride is gone—for even if the plate is so carefully repaired that the casual beholder will detect no flaw in it, I, knowing that it was once broken, can never be proud of the plate again—well, as I said, when this pride is gone, what is left?"

"Oh, my dear," said the Lady, "how much. Tenderness with the poor, damaged thing that once was so very beautiful, memories of all the joy it gave you, satisfaction that through your care and patience you saved the poor plate from complete destruction—all this and much more besides. No, don't throw away the broken pieces; you'd always regret it. Let's fit them together now, and then we'll take the plate to an expert to have it properly mended. And in the end, I am certain it will be dearer to you than when it was whole. The very sorrow you feel now will make it more precious to you. Come, dry your tears and let's start repairing."

This they did, and so eager were they, working and mending, that the Lady quite forgot to announce the momentous decision which had occasioned her visit. Only when she went home did she think of her omission, and then she was rather glad she had said or done nothing irrevocable. For, after all, if a thing is not broken into smithereens—if the possibility of repair still exists—why not profit from her own wisdom? If she were only wise and patient enough, perhaps her Ming plate might be mended, too.

The Farmer's Advice

By Alfalfa Smith

THERE was once a man who said the BIBLE should be rewritten—brought up to date, and he gave as the two great commandments:

KEEP YOUR MOUTH SHUT. And the second he like unto it: MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS. Can you improve these?

Fun at the Beach Party

A BEACH party can be made an enjoyable medium for entertaining your friends. Invite your guests to meet at your home or some designated convenient place near the bus, cars or boat, whichever you have selected to convey them to the beach. The hour set should be sufficiently early to allow ample time for daylight games and water sports.

Arriving at the beach, choose the least congested spot for your party. Of course the first on the program will be to don bathing attire and indulge in a short swim. Swimming balls should be provided (the collapsible kind), and the clever hostess will arrange interesting water games and contests.

Log-rolling is an amusing game. If you are going in private cars, two or more logs can be brought in the car. They should be of equal size and have the bark on. Contestants are to stand on these and turn the logs with their feet to roll over the water side by side the length of the course. The one who accomplishes this in the shortest length of time wins the prize.

Have the girls swim on their backs to a goal while fanning themselves with one hand without the fan touching the water.

Have a toy balloon race. Give each swimmer an inflated balloon and instruct them to push this about fifty yards to a goal. If this can be done against the wind it will be more amusing. Use the large balloons that can be inflated and securely tied when ready for this contest.

Playing tag in the water is great sport. Form a circle so players do not touch each other. When the signal is given each swimmer hastens to tag the one in front. Tagged swimmers must leave the water, and the survivor wins the prize.

Band modeling is interesting. Judges can be appointed to award the prize for the best head, fish, tort or whatever the model may be.

The amount of fruit and sand will be amusing; so will the race of the women carrying an eggshell on a spoon. Blind man's bluff and other games can be played on the sand.

While the bathers are changing their attire the hostess can set the table (spreading a table cover on the sand).

or perhaps she has ordered dinner for the party at the hotel or restaurant where her guests can enjoy dancing until they are again conveyed to the city in whatever mode of transport the hostess has chosen.

A Tip for the Homemaker Why scold the kiddies when they play with the sprinkling hose? It is so refreshing on a hot day, so let them put on their bathing suits or old bloomers, and turn the garden hose on each other or skip under the lawn spray each evening for five or ten minutes just before retiring. It will be a jolly ending for the day and set a soothing potion to induce sleep.

Comfort for the Sick Place the bed so the patient will not lie facing the light.

Do not nag the patient. Asking every few minutes how he feels or what he would like and what you can do for him is tiring and more or less distressing to a sick person.

Around 5 P. M. a patient usually gets restless. Washing the hands and face, fixing the hair a bit, shaking the pillow and changing the position of the patient will add considerable to the line of comfort.

Unpressed Pleats NO longer need one always bother with pleats. Dressmakers have not forgotten to press them in place for the new dress models, but use this form as a compromise between the genuine flare and the pleated skirt that has reigned for so many seasons. By leaving the would-be pleats unpressed they become soft flares that are graceful and unduly attractive.

Lingerie Collars THERE is a pronounced revival of the so-called lingerie touch in day-time costumes. Especially will this be true of the autumn mode, for the majority of frocks are very much colored anduffed, adorned with lace, georgettes, silk, and batistes for a light finish at neck and wrists, one of both.

Chiffon Dance Frocks BEARING the stamp of the French couture is a disconcertingly striking dance frock of chiffon, neither printed nor in the familiar all-one color. It is in green, mauve or coral and the voluminous trailing skirt has a wide irregularly shaped border of black lace, possibly like a flourish. The dress is semi-princess and the deep U decolletage is held on the shoulders by long glittering rhinestone ornaments.

RAGS WANTED—
THE RECORD-HERALD

THUNDERBOLT WINS LOCAL AUDIENCE

Francis and Von Sternberg's dramatic portrayals of life on the screen.

With "Thunderbolt" it seemed that these two, star and director, had achieved the greatest thing in the screen art. "Thunderbolt" came to the Fox-California theater last night for a two-day run, and in the all-talking screen medium, the picture's workers have perfected a new and greater picture of life in the little world.

No stronger drama has ever been conceived; no greater emotional climax ever screened than Von Sternberg and Bancroft have brought forth in "Thunderbolt."

It is the intriguing atmosphere of Harlem's black metropolis, where Bancroft as a fearful leader shows the lives and destinies of hundreds of human beings, it swings to the awe-inspiring setting of Sing Sing's Death Row, where the final exciting climaxes in this most exciting drama are enacted.

The story captures and vivifies the news horizon in the newspapers every day. It goes behind these fitting episodes and brings the whole tale forward. Superbly acted by a splendid cast, headed by Bancroft, Richard Arlen and Fay Wray, it is a slice of contemporary life made to live.

In "Thunderbolt" the all-talking medium of screen presentation is, exceptionally effective. There are so many things to hear as well as to see that the combination of picture and sound is necessary to the complete entertainment. The perfection of the dialog recording matches the perfection of the direction and the acting. "Thunderbolt" is wonderfully well rounded—truly a masterpiece picture. Also an all-talking comedy entitled "Jed's Vacation" and Fox talking news completes a very good bill.

WILLIAM HAINES ADDS BOXING TO TALENT

William Haines, who has had to learn football, baseball, golf, polo and even military drill for his picture in "Thunderbolt," has added boxing to his athletic accomplishments.

For his latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "A Man's Man," which comes tomorrow to the Fox-California theater as a sound synchronized production, this new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture is a prize fight story, but a satirical romance of Hollywood in which Haines stages, with Sam Hardy, one of the most thrilling fist fights ever seen on the screen. It is with bare knuckles, too, instead of the padded gloves of the prize ring.

Haines and Hardy both took lessons from a professional pugilist on several days before they "mixed it" in the big fight scene. James Cruze, the director, an expert on such forms of combat, made it one of the most thrilling contests in years and the whole studio gathered to watch it.

The new picture, adapted from a hitting comedy romance of Hollywood, showing the lives of its people away from the studios, Haines plays a movie clerk with a correspondence school complex, and an ambition to join the Elks, and Josephine Dunn, who makes a girl who wants to be a movie star. When they marry—things happen fast and furiously.

Sam Hardy plays the villain, an assistant film director, and Mae Busch is seen as a "hard-boiled" extra girl who takes the moviegoer blue under her protecting wing.

A Hollywood party in full ball actual scenes at the premiere of a picture in Hollywood, showing many of the famous stars of the screen on parade.

HEAVY TAXES PAID BY KEY SYSTEM

It will take nearly seven million passengers to meet the annual tax bill of the Key System Transit company, according to an analysis prepared by Transit company officials and made public today by C. C. Vargas, vice president in charge of finance for the Key System.

The Key System's tax bill for the year 1928 was $464,000, and there is little prospect of any reduction this year, Vargas says.

"A little pencil work brings us to the realization," Vargas says, "that it will cost the entire fare return from 6,828,571 revenue street car passengers to meet this tax bill. The company is serving as a tax collector and collects taxes for the state and its political subdivisions from its patrons. In 1928 the Key System earned $483,000 for a return on its investment of 27 millions, and had to pay $464,000 in taxes. Horses no longer pull street cars, but paying taxes are assessed against street car riders just as if the horses were wearing out the pavement between the rails.

Many Fail To Pass License Examination

MARTINEZ, Aug. 2.—About 15 percent of those applying for automobile driver's licenses have failed to pass their tests, according to George Belon, chief of the county traffic squad. Belon declared that a large percentage failed through inability to read direction signs.

Temporary certificates have been issued to those who fail until they take a second examination.

Including this paying cost, the total Key System tax bill for the year was $560,684 or $87,684 more than the company earned.

ON WITH THE SHOW

By ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1929, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

"ON WITH THE SHOW" is the first 100% natural color, Vitaphone picture. It is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

"W. . . . Home," the musical comedy having its road try-out, though a good show, it is not a want of financial backing to shipwreck and "bust." Willie Durant, its financier, refuses to continue paying expenses. Friendly with the star, Nita French, he furiously makes improper advances to Kitty, the check room girl. Kitty's father, "Dad" Malone, stage doorman and former actor, and Jimmy, the head usher, have been induced by Durant to invest their savings. Pingy, a rebel when salaries are withheld, and they make life miserable for the manager, Jerry Connelly.

Pete shrugged his shoulders and returned to his work, bellowing at the crew. In the wings, half hidden from view, stood Jerry looking on. He lighted a cigarette and sent long, blue spirals into the air. Life to him at that moment seemed to be on a roller coaster. Where or how he was going to get the money to pay off anyone was more than he could figure out. He had been in a lot of jams in this business, but his present position seemed far worse than any that had ever preceded it.

"Oh, Pete! Tell Dad," he cautioned as the stage hand came over.

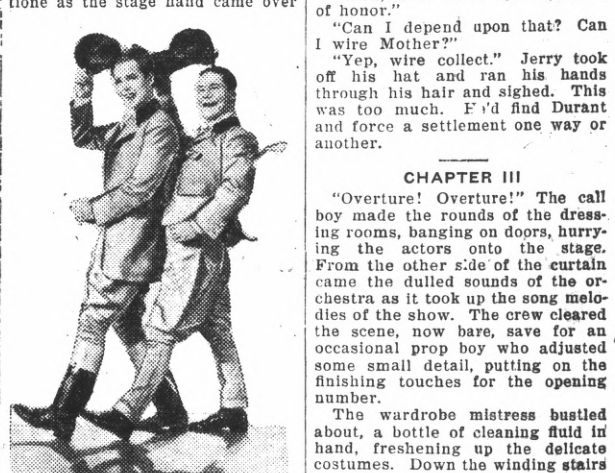

"Listen, if I had ten dollars in real coin I'd consider myself a millionaire. Now don't be a heel, kid," Jerry advised. "You promised you'd go through for me. You'll get paid sure and certain."

"When?" Harold demanded anxiously.

"Well, next Saturday. My word of honor."

"Can I depend upon that? Can I wire Mother?"

"Yep, wire collect." Jerry took off his hat and ran his hands through his hair and sighed. This was too much. F'd had Durant and force a settlement one way or another.

CHAPTER III

"Overture! Overture!" The call boy made the rounds of the dressing rooms, banging on doors, hurrying the actors onto the stage. From the other side of the curtain came the dulled sounds of the orchestra as it took up the song melodies of the show. The crew cleared the scene, now bare, save for an occasional prop boy who adjusted some small detail, putting on the finishing touches for the opening number.

The wardrobe mistress bustled about, a bottle of cleaning fluid in hand, freshening up the delicate costumes. Down the winding stairs trooped the chorus, carefully protecting the short, fluffy skirts billowed from their hips. They lined up in the wings, tapping their toes in time to the music. In a second line stood the chorus boys in white flannels, blue coats, and soft felt hats. One by one the principals appeared, ready to go on. At the peephole in the curtain stood Pete. He watched as though fascinated by the very ordinary sight of the house filling up. His body tensed; his hands dug deep into his pockets. Suddenly he turned away.

"Well, I'll be a dolly glass colic lemonade," he muttered.

"What's wrong, Pete?" Dad Malone impeded from the wings and stood beside the carpenter.

"I give de goll fiend two aise seats for her an' her old lady," Pete backed away, an angry scowl between his eyes. "I look out front, an' dere she sets wit' Larry Maloney, a cab driver. Kin you beat it? Jus' take a look, will ya? Right dere in de 'old row on your right. Look at 'em!"

Dad Malone bent an inquisitive eye to the peephole and his gaze rested upon a flashily dressed woman and her bulky escort. "Is that all?" Dad laughed.

"All! Ain't it enough? She's busted my heart. I should bust her nose," Pete announced savagely.

"She's not worth fretting about," Dad consoled. "There are plenty of nice girls."

"Yeh, but I got a investment in dis dame. Twenty-two bucks in five weeks, an' a lotta Annie Oakleys," Pete returned once more to the peephole as though to a gruesome sight that held him spell-bound whether he would or no. "He's buyin' her candy," he groaned. "Dere holdin' hands. Dat cluck! An' to tink I gotta toln out de lights on 'em!" He turned away.

"Well, Dad, de two of us is a couple a prize chumps. Me, investin' in dat dizzy blonde, an' you in dis show."

"Pete, don't you think this show really has a chance?" Dad asked anxiously, eager for any encouragement whatsoever.

Pete shook his head and snifted disdainfully. "De age of miracles is past."

"In front the house lights were slowly dimming. The soft glare of the footlights was growing brighter and brighter. Jerry hurried across the stage behind the back drop, stepping carefully and looking about nervously as though anxious to encounter any of his people. But even as he reached the wings nearest the stage door a hand caught at his arm.

SLAYER MEETS DEATH WITH SMILE

SAN QUENTIN STATE PRISON, Aug. 2.—UP—Determination of Russell St. Clair Beitzel, 28, to make his execution for the murder of Barbara Mauer as easy for prison authorities as possible was outstanding when the Philadelphia slayer mounted the gallows here today and was hanged. Beitzel, even succeeded in laughing on the platform above nearly 50 witnesses when the hood was being adjusted over his head. "I want two practice swings before I drop," he exclaimed in an even voice.

Jokes Death

The condemned man walked with shoulders thrown back as he entered the execution chamber.

"I see the customers are all here," he remarked, and his eyes turned as he looked carefully over those who were assembled. Then without undue haste he mounted the 13 steps to the gallows and seemed to break into the broad grin without difficulty.

A paleness of his face was the only sign that he might be nervous.

Still Smiles

Fifteen minutes before he started the death march Beitzel wrote a letter that was easily readable and in which he said "the smile is still with me, can't be wiped off." But to the last he neither admitted nor positively denied his guilt, authorities claimed.

The trap was sprung at 10:04 a. m. and he was pronounced dead 14 minutes later.

Ed King, investigator of the district attorney's office in Los Angeles, the city in which the crime was committed, contended immediately after the execution that Beitzel was on the verge of making a confession.

Leaves Family

He admitted, however, according to King, that beads once worn by his wife were found near the body of the woman who witnessed his death.

Beitzel left a wife and two small sons in Pennsylvania to carry on his clandestine relations with Miss Mauer. Her demands for him to marry her were presented at the trial as motive for the crime.

REDS IN NEW BRITISH BREAK

MOSCOW, Aug. 2.—(U.P.)—Soviet government has disrupted preliminary negotiations for resumption of relations with Great Britain because of the insistence of Britain that disputed questions be settled before an exchange of ambassadors.

The negotiations started upon invitation of the new Labor government in Britain, early this week. Valerian Dvoglevsky, Soviet Ambassador to Paris, went to London to confer with Arthur Henderson, British Foreign Secretary. Dvoglevsky has been ordered to return to Paris, the government announced today.

The presidium of the central executive committee will meet Wednesday and it is considered probable that the matter will be submitted by the presidium to a plenary session of the Central Executive committee. The plenary session is expected to meet shortly.

Henderson's position makes necessary new instructions from the Central Executive committee, the government said in announcing the break.

Meanwhile, Dvoglevsky was informed that the British position "proves that the British government does not wish to or cannot restore relations" with the Soviet Union "or it would not insist on solution of such complicated and disputable questions as mutual claims and counter-claims as a preliminary."

KELLY FREE, TO LEAVE FOR NEW YORK

SAN QUENTIN STATE PRISON, Aug. 2.—(U.P.)—Demands of justice that followed the sensational Hollywood fist fight in which Ray Raymond, musical comedy star, was killed, were satisfied today and Paul Kelly, juvenile motion picture actor, was released from this penitentiary.

Kelly, sentenced to serve five years for manslaughter after being found guilty of administering punches that caused Raymond's death, had served 25 months of his term and was allowed to leave on parole.

Shortly after sunrise he was driven out of the gates in an expensive automobile.

He refused to comment on his plans other than that he would go at once to the parole officer in San Francisco and would depart for New York a short time later. He refused to see newspapermen.

Kelly and Dorothy Mackaye, stage actress and widow of Raymond, were both brought here after their

State Seeking To Try Pair In Dry Deaths

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 2.—UP—The fight to try W. W. Thomson, federal prohibition agent, and his unofficial aid, Jeff Harris, in state courts for the murder of two Tecumseh farmers will be carried to the United States supreme court if necessary, assistant District Attorney V. P. Crowe said today.

Crowe said he had located the guns used in the slaying of Oscar Lowery and James Harris, the two farmers, during a liquor raid July 4.

Crowe said that a gun, which Jeff Harris said Lowery used to shoot at him belonged to Wesley Lowery, the slain man's brother who did not arrive at the scene until the shooting was over.

Thomson was at liberty on bond today while Harris was held in jail here.

convictions following Raymond's death, Miss Mackaye was sentenced for concealing the fight and was granted her liberty again several months ago.

Defendant Wins Suit On Note In El Cerrito

MARTINEZ, Aug. 2.—Superior Judge H. V. Alvarado today handed down a decision restraining the sale of property in El Cerrito that is owned by M. S. de Albergaria to satisfy a note held by R. T. Bell.

Judge Alvarado declared that "there is no question that Bell secured a greater amount of interest than is provided by law." It was held that the interest rate charged was prohibited by an act known as the usury law.

In his suit de Albergaria charged that when he borrowed $9281 from Bell he was forced to sign a note for $11,000 and to pay interest at the rate of 12 percent.

The decision restrains Bell from selling the property until the principal sum becomes due on Oct. 3, 1929.

La Guardia To Run For Mayor Of New York

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—UP—Rep. Fiorello H. La Guardia has been nominated as the Republican Fusion candidate for mayor of New York city in the next election.

La Guardia will head the ticket opposed by Mayor James J. Walker, who recently consented to run for a second term.

The representative was designated for the place at an unofficial convention of several "anti-Tammy" groups. His nomination will have to be confirmed by Republican voters at the primary election Sept. 17, but nothing short of an upset is likely to prevent his leading the ticket.

NEW METAL TO AID AIRPLANES

MARSHFIELD, Ore., Aug. 1.—UP—A magic metal that may revolutionize airplane and automobile engine construction in the near future has set all the Oregon coast country between the Siuslaw and the California state line afire with hope of fabulous fortunes.

Beryllium or glucinum has been found in great quantities in the black sands along the coast. It has been discovered. It is a silver-white metal.

An airplane engine constructed from the metal has been exhibited in the East, and is lighter than an engine constructed with aluminum, and is of tensile strength five times that of steel.

Last Call for Dinner!

Now or never must be the watchword of those loyal Richmond boosters who wish to sit down at dinner with their fellow townsmen and the notables from other cities, at the Berkeley Country Club, at 7 o'clock next Tuesday evening, August 6.

The reservations are pouring in, and there is a definite limit to the number that can be seated on that eventful occasion.

The invitations are out and the reservations are pouring in.

Naturally, there is a definite limitation to the number that can be seated on that eventful occasion.

So this might be termed the last call for dinner.

A reservation in time will assure you of a place. A delay may mean your absence at what is generally looked forward to as the outstanding gathering in the history of Richmond.

This is a Chamber of Commerce dinner, held to commemorate the completion of the Parr-Richmond terminal on the inner harbor and to celebrate the twenty-fourth birthday of the city.

We should show our loyalty and our interest in Richmond by attending.

PONG WAN HERBS SPECIAL

LIVELY COMPOUNDED RELIEVE MANY AILMENTS AT ONCE.

Richmond, Cal. June 30, 1928.

For years I had terrible pains in my right side. I also had liver and gall bladder trouble, which caused the pain to run clear around my back. All the doctors whom I consulted said that I could not be helped unless an operation was performed.

Herbalist Being aware that many of my friends had been greatly benefited by the Pong Wan herbs, I began to take them. I drank the tea conscientiously for seven weeks, at the end of which time I felt that my relief was complete. Now I have the added satisfaction of knowing that it is also permanent, for a year has elapsed and I am still free from pain and feel splendid.

C. C. DINNER TO ATTRACT MANY

Next Tuesday evening's Chamber of Commerce dinner at the Berkeley country club will be an outstanding success, attracting at least 200 local and outside business and industrial leaders, it was indicated yesterday in acceptance received by Joseph F. Brooks, chairman.

The gathering, which will be formal, will be for the purpose of commemorating the completion of the new Parr-Richmond terminal on the inner harbor, and to celebrate the twenty-fourth birthday anniversary of the incorporation of the city of Richmond, which falls on the date of the dinner.

The program will include talks by Mayor A. L. Paulsen, who will offer the greetings of the city; A. M. Newhall, president of the San Francisco chamber of commerce, speaking on "The Proposed San Francisco Bay Chamber of Commerce"; Fred D. Parr, president of the Parr Terminal, "The Tangible Results of Cooperation in the City of Richmond"; A. B. C. Dohrmann, well known merchant, "Retail Trade in California"; and Paul Shoup, president of the Southern Pacific company, "The Development of Rail Transportation in the West."

Brooks will open the meeting and P. M. Sanford, president of the Richmond Chamber of Commerce, will act as toastmaster.

A huge birthday cake, five feet in diameter, decorated with 24 candles, will be a feature of the decorations.

A golf tournament during the afternoon will precede the dinner and program in the evening.

An outstanding feature of the musical program will be tenor solos by Charles F. Bulotti, well known local vocalist.

There will be numbers by the dinner trio, made up of H. A. Garcia, violin; Walter Buehner, cello, and Emily Linden, piano.

Parrot Haunts S. F. City Pound

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 2.—UP—Page Conan Doyle, London, with her "Three Live Ghosts" has nothing on the San Francisco pound, which boasts of having a haunted parrot.

"Ah! Ah! Buckets of Blood, Give'm—" interspersed now and then with "Polly wants a cracker. Polly wants a cracker—er—er—is to be heard at the mystic hour of midnight.

Thrice is the call repeated, and then a deep solemn silence prevails.

Big dogs and little dogs, cats, mice and other animals crawl to corners and shiver with fright, too scared to express their fear by adding their own weird noises to the terrifying sound.

Bill Polk, chief deputy, swears by this yarn. He has heard the parrot rehearse its lines and actually saw the green feathered ghost.

"I wouldn't swear it was a ghost, but there is something funny about the whole business," he remarked when interviewed.

FOUR KILLED IN OAKLAND BY CARS

July saw four automobile deaths in Oakland as against six for June. It was reported in the monthly summary of the Eastbay Safety Council, made public to-day.

The figures for the first seven months of 1929 are 50 deaths from automobile accidents, as compared with 45 for the corresponding period of the previous year.

While the year 1929 began with the appearance of being a record breaking one for deaths, later months showed smaller figures, giving hope to the possibility that the year may be concluded without any increase over last year, it was said.

In the state and nation automobile fatalities are greatly on the increase over 1928. It is shown in figures received by the local organization from the National Safety Council in Chicago, Oakland ranking in seventh position in cities of the same population.

Of the victims killed in the first seven months, 32 met death at intersections, indicating, according to the Safety Council, the need for more and better safety stations. The new safety zones already installed along East Fourteenth street, are said by the police to have slowed down traffic to a marked degree, and the fatal accidents from that district are already notably on the decrease. The Safety Council, according to Arthur W. Moore, president, will press upon the city council the need for including money in the forthcoming budget to install the safety stations all the way to the San Leandro line.

Globe Trotter Collects Spoons

BAKERSFIELD, Aug. 2.—(UP)—"Spoons and then more spoons," is the slogan of H. H. Pink, former globe trotter, lecturer and designer of such utensils that are important to the eating of one's meals.

Pink is the possessor of a collection of spoons. He has more than 3800 of them. This was brought to light recently when he was persuaded to exhibit them.

The spoons range from the "muck muck" three foot wooden totem pole type, carved by Alaska Eskimos, to a minute ebony spoon.

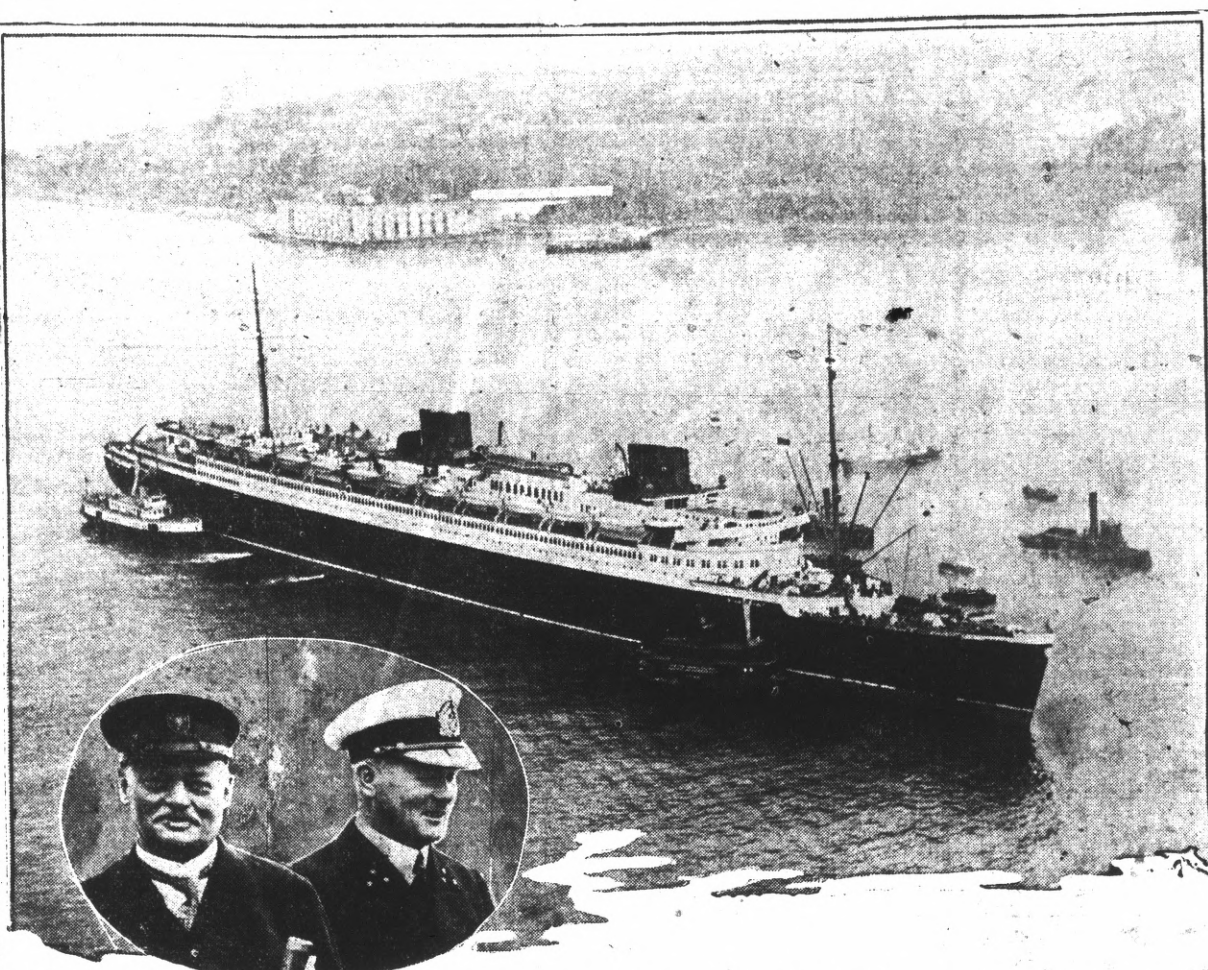

Some date back nearly 2000 years, while others are just the every day garden variety that is doled out in the coffee shops.

Pink has a set of spoons dating back 1600 years, once the dining utensils of an Egyptian prince. George and Martha Washington used some other spoons that are now in Pink's possession.

New Sea Queen Wins Speed Laurels

PHILIP HEINEKEN (left) president of the North German Lloyd, and Capt. Leopold Ziegenlein, of the Bremen, were all smiles when the giant liner anchored off quarantine in New York after smashing the Atlantic crossing record made by the Mauretania, by more than eight hours.

ship passed over Cape de Gata, on the southern coast of Spain, at 6 p. m. E. S. T. Thursday. Several hours later she passed near Gibraltar and at 11:50 p. m. E. S. T. flew over Cadiz, Spain, and out into the Atlantic.

Pleasant Trip
All reports from aboard indicated that the passengers were having a pleasant trip, the weather being fair in spite of the wind.

Considerable mystery was preserved at first about the presence of a stowaway aboard, Commander Hugo Eckener not wishing to have the youth rated as a "hero" by making his name public.

The ship's officers confirmed the fact, however, that he had jumped onto the bag just as the dirigible left the hangar in Friedrichshafen. He was confined to the crew's quarters and will be deported to Germany by boat when the dirigible reaches the United States. Severe punishment will be sought because the Zeppelin's officers contend that the youth endangered the lives of all aboard by his act, inasmuch as he might have ripped the gas bag, with serious consequences.

REPORTED TO BE NEAR ISLANDS
WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—(UP)—The Graf Zeppelin reported to the Navy Department at 7:05 p. m. E. S. T. that she was ninety miles south of Pico, one of the Azores Islands, and making 45 knots an hour against a light wind.

This was the first message received by the Naval wireless station from the Zeppelin. Henceforth the Graf will report her position to the Navy, first at eight and then at four-hour intervals.

CRUISER REPORTS SEEING CRAFT
HONOLULU, Aug. 2.—(UP)—The Portuguese cruiser Vasco de Gama reported tonight that the Graf Zeppelin passed south of San Miguel Island, at 4:50 p. m. Azores time (1:50 p. m. E. S. T.).

PASSENGER TELLS OF LONG TRIP
By FRANK NICHOLSON
Columbia Broadcasting Representative; United Press Special Correspondent

ON BOARD GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 2.—(UP)—The Graf Zeppelin fought her way against strong cross head winds toward the Azores this afternoon.

Our progress was considerably delayed and we were obliged to point 20 degrees off west to make a straight course on our route.

Our position at 6:20 p. m. our time (2:20 p. m. E. S. T.) was Longitude 21 west, Latitude 36 north.

We have been following the 36th parallel since leaving the coast of Spain and expect to reach the Azores this afternoon, but our progress has been slower than ex-

THE FASHION OPENS NEW STORE

The Fashion, operate by S. Abraham, opened the doors of its new home at 921 Macdonald avenue to the Richmond public last night with an informal dance. The store was crowded from the opening hour at 7 o'clock until after 10 o'clock.

Fall styles, representing the latest word in fashions, were displayed. No merchandise was placed on sale as last night was reserved to give the public the opportunity of inspecting the new store.

In the display windows were coats of mink and squirrel. Velvet evening gowns in the new fall shade of flame color and gowns of gold lace occupied places of advantage.

On the mezzanine floor, Charles Cecil's orchestra provided music for the dancing.

At Abraham, manager, and his assistants were on hand to welcome the visitors and show them the features of the new store.

Today, the store will be opened for business when patrons of the Fashion will have the opportunity of purchasing from the new stock selected especially for the new home.

Mt. St. Helens Apes Seen Again

KELSO, Wash., Aug. 2.—(UP)—The Mt. St. Helens apes have been seen again. They first became known when several years ago, a party of miners claimed that they had been living in a cave on the mountain.

This cave opens on a sheer cliff at a height of 250 feet from the creek bed, and Bradley thinks there is a secret entrance to the cave.

We passed Gibraltar between 3 and 4 p. m. today and encountered good weather during the morning.

The Commander has confirmed that a young German stowaway has been found aboard. He is confined to the crew's quarters and will be deported as soon as we reach Lakehurst, to be severely punished the lives of all aboard by jumping to the top of the bag as the dirigible left her hangar in Friedrichshafen.

The position given in the above dispatch is about 250 miles south-east of San Miguel, the eastern-most island of the Azores.

TOBACCO KING CALLED BY DEATH

BRIGHTON, England, Aug. 2.—UP—Bernhard Baron, multi-millionaire tobacco magnate known even more widely for his philanthropies than for his great industrial success, died today of heart disease at 78.

Baron was born in Russia, of French extraction. He went to the United States when he was 16, and began his business career in a New York tobacco shop.

Years later, Baron invented a tobacco machine. He took it to England, and with it earned great wealth. He became a naturalized British subject.

It was revealed only a few years ago that Baron was a philanthropist on a great scale. One of his greatest pleasures was to go around the poorer districts of London, find needy cases, and take care of them. Few of the beneficiaries ever knew who he was, except that he was a kindly old man whose charity was well-timed and practical.

Protect Your Furniture

A $1.25 to Bid Your Home of Moths May Save You Hundreds of Dollars.

MORTEMOTH KILLS MOTHS

The gas from Mortemoth crystals not only protects your furniture for a long time, but contact with it kills all moths, their eggs and their dangerous larvae in furniture which is already infested.

The proper method of using Mortemoth crystals is to tie them in small sacks, and to place these sacks down in the channel of the piece, as deeply as possible, behind the cushions, so that, upon expansion, the gas will spread and fill the spring units in the back and in the bottom of the piece.

When the sacks are empty, fill them again.

EIGHT COUPLES, ONE SOLO IN DANCE

With eight and a half couples remaining, the 172nd hour of the El Cerrito marathon dance passed at midnight last night.

At four o'clock yesterday morning Mable Sump was forced out of the grind. Her partner, Walter Maloff, soloed until this afternoon when Elackie Cox was forced out.

Maloff then coupled with Estelle Hilderbrandt, Cox's partner.

Effie Lasswell was forced out yesterday morning and her partner, John Sweeney started to solo. He will be out at four o'clock this morning unless he finds another partner.

Tonight will be featured by a big entertainment, according to Joe Rossi, promoter of the event.

Scouts Parade Before Prince As Meet Opens

ARROW PARK, Eng. Aug. 2.—UP—Fifteen thousand Boy Scouts their bright banners waving, paraded proudly before the Prince of Wales and Charles G. Dawes, United States ambassador to England at one of the picturesque ceremonies of the Scout Jamboree this afternoon.

The Americans, by alphabetical right, led the van. A silken Stars and Stripes floated at their head, and the 1300 boys from every section of the United States marched in straight array at salute, while the prince stood at attention.

Behind them came the thousands of Scouts from the four corners of the earth, and the occupants of the Royal box were thrilled by the display of sturdy universal boyhood.

The Prince and Sir Robert Baden-Powell, newly created a baron, occupied the reviewing stand in front of the Royal box, with Dawes and others of the party behind them.

SON OF BISHOP SELECTED BY EDISON

stitute of Technology to become a chemical engineer, with all expenses paid by the inventor, then make his bid for fame in the great Edison laboratories, under the guiding hand of the electrical wizard himself.

"I said I'd sacrifice comfort to achieve success," young Huston said after he was named winner today, referring to one of the first questions in the examination, "which would you sacrifice to achieve success,—honor, health, happiness, comfort, riches or reputation?"

Cautious Talker
Aside from that lone revelation, however, the young scientist exercised an almost professional caution in his talks with newspapermen. He proved a poor subject for an interview. It was noticed that, when he shook hands with Col. Charles A. Lindebergh a look of warm understanding passed between them.

The temperamental kinship revealed itself fully when the youth was asked for his reply to one of the personal questions of the examination: "You may not ask me that," he said.

Edison Glows
But if any one of the fifty-odd persons who met on the broad lawn of Edison's home this morning glowed with more happy enthusiasm than Huston, it was the aged inventor himself.

Not a boy of the 49 who represented each state in the union and the District of Columbia had failed in the difficult test. Not a single young genius in the select company had even scored lower than 88. Edison's heart was warmed by their performance, and the instinct of generosity rose.

He spoke to Dr. Samuel W. Stratton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who had announced the winner, and the latter, smiling, lifted his hand to silence the boyish cheers for Huston.
